Job title	Research Assistant
Division	Social Sciences
Department	Politics and International Relations
Location	Manor Road Building, Oxford
Grade and salary	Grade 6: £30,502 - £36,386 per annum
Hours	Part-time (10 hours per week)
Contract type	Fixed-term from 2 years
Reporting to	Prof Stephen Whitefield

Job description

Overview of the role

The EU Horizon/UKRI project Neo-authoritarianisms in Europe and the liberal democratic response \(AUTHLIB\) | DPIR \(ox.ac.uk\) is looking for a research assistant to work with Stephen Whitefield and Spyros Kosmidis on coding and analysis of data relating to emotional rhetoric in political texts. This element of the project will dovetail with research done by other partner institutions on the programmatic content of party appeals, and the work on emotional rhetoric will in turn inform subsequent experimental research in Oxford to test for the lability of emotional responses to political rhetoric.

Responsibilities/duties

- Discuss research design with Professors Whitefield and Kosmidis
- Liaise with other machine learning colleagues across the project
- Collect a large corpus of textual data
- Develop a textual codebook for research assistants (RAs)
- Train and validate the machine learning classifier
- Employ the classifier on unseen data

- Assist with the data analysis and visualisation tasks

Selection criteria

Essential

- Knowledge of machine learning analysis
- Familiarity with analysis of textual data
- Ability to work accurately to produce a textual codebook
- Ability to train machine learning classifier
- Ability to assist with data analysis and visualisation tasks

Desirable

- Familiarity with the work of colleagues across the university working in the field

Pre-employment screening

Department of Politics and International Relations

Politics and International Relations at Oxford University have a long and distinguished history in the education of leading figures in academia, politics, the media and public life, both in the UK and internationally. Teaching and research activities in this area were combined in 2000 to create a Department of Politics and International Relations. With around 90 academic staff, the Department is one of the largest departments internationally and consistently ranks very highly in national and international university guides for the subject. It is home to major research projects, a vibrant community of academic visitors, and a strong group of post-doctoral researchers, supported by highly competitive research fellowships, working in the full range of disciplinary sub-fields.

The Department is located in the Social Sciences building at Manor Road, along with the Department of Economics, and the integrated Social Science Library. The building provides excellent facilities including a lecture theatre, a large computer laboratory and a range of seminar rooms as well as a cafeteria and common room for use by both staff and students. The Manor Road Building is served by a shared IT and web team.

An experienced administrative team supports the Department's research and teaching activities. The Department's core administration currently comprises twenty two staff, grouped into teams that provide dedicated support for: Courses, Finance, HR, Research Support, and Communications and Alumni Relations. The administrative teams work closely with each other as well as with staff in other parts of the University, in particular with the Social Sciences division, Personnel Services, and Research Services, as well as with the University's many colleges.

The Department is responsible for the syllabus, provision of lectures and for the examination of undergraduate students, who are taught mainly by tutorials organised by college tutors. The MPhil degrees are now terminal degrees for a range of students who proceed to further professional training and to careers in public or private organisations. For many students, the MPhil also forms the first two years of a four-year doctoral programme. The MPhil gives students advanced scholarly and theoretically sophisticated substantial study of the subject, together with training in research design and associated methodological analysis and critique, and advanced training in research methods. Alumni of the MPhil and the DPhil have gone on to form a wide network of Oxford-trained academics with positions in university departments and research units worldwide, and have taken up positions of leadership in numerous public and private institutions across the globe.

Social Sciences Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups, known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The divisions are responsible for academic strategy and operational planning, oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, and for personnel and resource management. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with over 1,000 academic and research staff working across fifteen departments, faculties and schools. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power.

The Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The Times Higher Education (THE) University Rankings placed the University of Oxford as number one in the world for Social Sciences in 2018 and 2019. REF 2014 confirmed Oxford as the UK powerhouse for research in the social sciences, accounting for more 4* research than any other institution. Our academic and research staff and students are international thought leaders, generating new evidence, insights and policy tools with which to address some of the major global challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, poverty and forced migration, effective governance and justice. As well as active interdisciplinary links with researchers in other divisions at Oxford, we engage and collaborate extensively with other universities and a wide range of governmental and non-governmental practitioner communities such as law, business, public health and welfare, international development and education around the world. The Division has an extensive portfolio of external funders, partners and supporters, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £50 million per year and philanthropic income over £25 million a year. As part of our commitment to equality, eleven of our departments have achieved bronze Athena SWAN awards (a UK accreditation scheme recognising organisations' commitment to equality and diversity, particularly in gender): the Oxford Internet Institute, Global and Area Studies, Sociology, Archaeology, the Blavatnik School of Government, Economics, Education, International Development, Law, Anthropology & Museum Ethnography, and the Saïd Business School; and the School of Geography and the Environment holds an Athena SWAN silver award.

The Division delivers an exceptional range of high-quality educational programmes all underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. The student body is made up of over 2,000 undergraduate students, nearly 3,000 students studying postgraduate taught programmes and 1,200 postgraduate research students. The programmes we offer are wide-ranging, often interdisciplinary and include professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The Division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE) at undergraduate level; and at the Masters level programmes such as the Bachelor in Civil Law (BCL), Environmental Change and Management, International Relations, and Social Data Science.

The University's policy on retirement

The University operates an Employer Justified Retirement Age (EJRA) for all academic posts and some academic-related posts. The University has adopted an EJRA of 30 September before the 69th birthday for all academic and academic-related staff in posts at grade 8 and above. The justification for this is explained at: <https://hr.admin.ox.ac.uk/the-ejra>

For existing employees, any employment beyond the retirement age is subject to approval through the procedures: <https://hr.admin.ox.ac.uk/the-ejra>

There is no normal or fixed age at which staff in posts at grades 1–7 have to retire. Staff at these grades may elect to retire in accordance with the rules of the applicable pension scheme, as may be amended from time to time.

Equality of opportunity

Entry into employment with the University and progression within employment will be determined only by personal merit and the application of criteria which are related to the duties of each particular post and the relevant salary structure. In all cases, ability to perform the job will be the primary consideration. No applicant or member of staff shall be discriminated against because of age, disability, gender reassignment, marriage or civil partnership, pregnancy or maternity, race, religion or belief, sex, or sexual orientation.

Benefits of working at the University

Employee benefits

University employees enjoy 38 days' paid holiday, generous pension schemes, travel discounts, and a variety of professional development opportunities.
