The role

The Department of Politics and International Relations is seeking to appoint a part-time fixed term Departmental Lecturer in British Politics and Government and/or British Political History for two years with effect from September 2023 or as soon as possible thereafter.

The successful candidate will provide teaching in politics for The Queen's College.

Teaching and work-space will be provided at The Queen's College and/or and the Department of Politics and International Relations. The Departmental Lecturer will have the right to lunch or dinner at the College up to 6 times a week in term time.

For an informal discussion about this role please contact Joint Head of Department Nicholas Owen (nicholas.owen@politics.ox.ac.uk).

Responsibilities

The main duties of the Departmental Lecturer will be to contribute to teaching and supervision at the undergraduate level; to organise the teaching for Politics students at the Queen's College, to contribute to the examining and admissions processes; and to conduct independent research in the field of specialism.

1. Teaching, Supervision and Administration

The Departmental Lecturer is expected to:

- Provide six hours' tutorial or class teaching for Queen's in each week of term in
  - the undergraduate paper in British Politics and Government since 1900,
  - Introduction to Politics (Practice of Politics), and
  - one or more other undergraduate paper(s); or,
  - should the hours required by Queen's be less, for other colleges or for the Department of Politics and International Relations; either under an exchange arrangement or in return for tuition fees to be remitted to the College.

The hours concerned will be averaged over the academic year.

- Work with Fellows and other lecturers at Queen's in organising the teaching for Politics students and arranging such external teaching as is necessary;
- Support the academic oversight of students reading Politics at Queen's, including the provision of advice and guidance to students relating to attendance, conduct, coursework, performance and welfare, in all cases referring matters to others as appropriate;
- Take part in the undergraduate admissions process at Queen's for Philosophy, Politics and Economics and History and Politics;
- Participate in the administrative work of the College;
- Play an active role in the intellectual life of the College and the Department of Politics and International Relations.

2. Research

The Departmental Lecturer is expected to:

- Be actively engaged in sophisticated, original and independent research of outstanding quality in British Politics and Government or British political history;
- Publish in highly-ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and presses, and present papers at conferences and other scholarly events;
- Seek research grants.

Selection criteria

Essential

- Hold, or be close to completion of (submitted and awaiting examination) a PhD/DPhil in British Politics or British Political History, or a closely related field;
- An appropriate range of teaching experience and the ability to provide excellent class and tutorial teaching to high-achieving students at undergraduate level;
- Experience in carrying out independent research, evidenced by a strong record, or very strong potential for, publications in highly-ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and/or major presses and a clear plan of research to be conducted during the years of the appointment;
- Excellent collaborative team working and organisational skills, together with the ability to innovate and work effectively with colleagues and to work independently meeting deadlines;
- Excellent oral and written communication skills;
- Demonstrated willingness to contribute to the pastoral care of students and the sensitivity to deal with pastoral issues;
- Willingness, commitment and ability to contribute to the full range of academic and administrative duties in The Queen's College, including engaging in student assessment, examination and course design;
- A commitment to their own professional development.

Desirable

- Previous experience in teaching;
- Previous experience with course administration.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

Please read the candidate notes on the University's pre-employment screening procedures at: <https://www.jobs.ox.ac.uk/pre-employment-checks>

About the University of Oxford

Welcome to the University of Oxford. We aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

We believe our strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, while providing all our staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that enables everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is our strength, vital for innovation and creativity, we aspire to build a truly diverse community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.

While we have long traditions of scholarship, we are also forward-looking, creative and cutting-edge. Oxford is one of Europe's most entrepreneurial universities and we rank first in the UK for university spin-outs, and in recent years we have spun out 15-20 new companies every year. We are also recognised as leaders in support for social enterprise.

Join us and you will find a unique, democratic and international community, a great range of staff benefits and access to a vibrant array of cultural activities in the beautiful city of Oxford.

The Department of Politics and International Relations

Politics and International Relations at Oxford University have a long and distinguished history in the education of leading figures in academia, politics, the media and public life, both in the UK and internationally. Teaching and research activities in this area were combined in 2000 to create a Department of Politics and International Relations. With around 90 academic staff, the Department is one of the largest departments internationally and consistently ranks first in The Times and The Guardian university guides for the subject. It is home to major research projects, a vibrant community of academic visitors, and a strong group of post-doctoral researchers, supported by highly competitive research fellowships, working in the full range of disciplinary sub-fields.

The department attracts some of the best academics in the field to work here as permanent faculty, as part of major research projects or as academic visitors. There is a strong post-doctoral group supported by highly competitive research fellowships and working across a broad range of fields.

The Department is located in the Social Sciences building at Manor Road, along with the Department of Economics, the Centres for Criminology and Socio-Legal Studies, and the integrated Social Science Library. The building provides excellent facilities including a lecture theatre, a large computer laboratory and a range of seminar rooms as well as a cafeteria and common room for use by both staff and students. The Manor Road Building is served by a shared IT and web team.

An experienced Professional Services function supports the department's research and teaching activities. The department's core Professional Service is grouped into teams that provide dedicated support for: Courses, Research, Finance, HR, and Communications & Alumni Relations. The administrative teams work closely with each other as well as with staff in other parts of the University, in particular with the Social Sciences division, Personnel Services, and Research Services, as well as with the University's many colleges.

Social Sciences Division

Oxford is a world-leading centre for research across the disciplines of the social sciences. Characterised by a wide range of methodologies, themes and fields of scholarship, multi-disciplinary research and innovative ideas thrive in an environment underpinned by excellence across the disciplines of the social sciences.

Our approach to supporting research across the Social Sciences Division has been highly successful in the last ten years, with the volume of research awards continuing to rise and the development of a large number of research centres and groupings. Researchers at Oxford receive significant support and guidance in the development of their research, including career development, research and impact funding, research project design and management, and research outputs from academic and administrative colleagues across the University, division and departments.
