The role

The Department of Politics and International Relations is seeking to appoint a full-time fixed term Departmental Lecturer in Middle Eastern Politics. The successful candidate will provide teaching and supervision for the Department of Politics and International Relations at the undergraduate and graduate level and contribute to the Departmental examining and graduate admissions processes. They will also be expected to undertake independent research. Office space and other relevant facilities will be provided in the Department of Politics and International Relations. As well as providing teaching for the department's core Middle East politics provision, the Departmental Lecturer will be expected to teach on research methods, including leading on research design sessions.

If you would like to find out more about joining the DPIR research and teaching team at Oxford, or if you have any questions regarding the application process, please contact the DPIR HR Team at vacancies@politics.ox.ac.uk.

Candidates are also welcomed to contact the joint Head of Department, Nicholas Owen, at nicholas.owen@politics.ox.ac.uk for an informal discussion of this post.

All enquiries will be treated in strict confidence and will not form part of the selection decision.

Responsibilities

The Departmental Lecturer will contribute to teaching and examining in the subject of Middle Eastern Politics at the undergraduate and graduate level; participate in Departmental administration; contribute to the examining and admissions processes and conduct independent research in their field of specialism.

1. Teaching, Supervision and Administration

- Organise specific areas of the syllabus and provide teaching and supervision for graduate and undergraduate students in politics and related papers broadly conceived. These include:
  - Undergraduate: the post-holder would be expected to provide teaching (tutorials, classes and lectures) for the undergraduate paper on Politics in the Middle East (211). The post-holder would also provide lectures on the Politics Prelims and Comparative Government 201.
  - Graduate: the post-holder would be expected to supervise MPhil students, contribute to doctoral research seminars and research design workshops, and teach a graduate paper on protest, social movements, and revolution. The post-holder would also contribute to teaching on the core course on comparative government, produce lecture notes or slides, and contribute to other course materials including reading lists and reference guides.
- Engage in assessment and university examining at the undergraduate and graduate levels as required.
- Participate in administrative tasks to support teaching, supervision and curriculum development.
- Participate in the admission of graduate students.
- Play an active role in the intellectual life of the Department, both during term-time and vacations.
- Be first contact for student matters relating to attendance, conduct, coursework, performance, and welfare (referring matters to appropriate others).
- Gather and analyse feedback from students, colleagues, and examiners.

The Department uses a system of 'stint points' to measure teaching and supervision workload: details of the current tariff may be found in the Appendix. This post has a DPIR stint expectation of 288 stint points per year.

2. Research

The Departmental Lecturer is expected to:

- Be actively engaged in sophisticated, original and independent research of outstanding quality in politics.
- Publish in highly-ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and presses, and present papers at conferences or public meetings.

Selection criteria

Essential

- A doctorate (or close to completion) in Middle Eastern politics or a closely related field, either complete or submitted and awaiting examination
- An appropriate range of teaching experience and the ability to provide excellent teaching to high-achieving students at both the undergraduate and graduate level in the field of Middle Eastern politics, and to advise MPhil students on their research projects
- Experience in carrying out independent research in Middle Eastern politics or a closely related field, evidenced by a strong record of publications in highly ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and/or major presses and a clear plan of research to be conducted during the appointment
- Excellent collaborative team working and organisational skills, together with the ability to innovate and work effectively with colleagues and to work independently meeting deadlines
- Excellent oral and written communication skills
- Demonstrated willingness to contribute to the pastoral care of students and the sensitivity to deal with pastoral issues
- Willingness, commitment and ability to contribute to the full range of academic and administrative duties in the Department, including engaging in student assessment, examination and course design
- A commitment to their own professional development.

Desirable

- Specialist research and teaching capacity that includes the history and theory of Middle Eastern politics, social movements and protest, and research methodologies.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

The Department of Politics and International Relations

Politics and International Relations at Oxford University have a long and distinguished history in the education of leading figures in academia, politics, the media and public life, both in the UK and internationally. Teaching and research activities in this area were combined in 2000 to create a Department of Politics and International Relations. With around 90 academic staff, the Department is one of the largest departments internationally and consistently ranks first in The Times and The Guardian university guides for the subject. It is home to major research projects, a vibrant community of academic visitors, and a strong group of post-doctoral researchers, supported by highly competitive research fellowships, working in the full range of disciplinary sub-fields.

The department attracts some of the best academics in the field to work here as permanent faculty, as part of major research projects or as academic visitors. There is a strong post- doctoral group supported by highly competitive research fellowships and working across a broad range of fields.

The Department is located in the Social Sciences building at Manor Road, along with the Department of Economics, the Centres for Criminology and Socio-Legal Studies, and the integrated Social Science Library. The building provides excellent facilities including a lecture theatre, a large computer laboratory and a range of seminar rooms as well as a cafeteria and common room for use by both staff and students. The Manor Road Building is served by a shared IT and web team.

An experienced Professional Services function supports the department's research and teaching activities. The department's core Professional Service is grouped into teams that provide dedicated support for: Courses, Research, Finance, HR, and Communications & Alumni Relations. The administrative teams work closely with each other as well as with staff in other parts of the University, in particular with the Social Sciences division, Personnel Services, and Research Services, as well as with the University's many colleges.
