The role

The Department of Politics and International Relations (DPIR) and the Oxford School of Global and Area Studies (OSGA) are seeking to appoint a full-time fixed term Departmental Lecturer in the Politics and International Relations of China. The successful candidate will provide teaching and supervision for the DPIR and OSGA at the undergraduate and graduate level and contribute to the Departmental examining and graduate admissions processes. They will also be expected to undertake independent research. Office space and other relevant facilities will be provided in the Department of Politics and International Relations. As well as providing teaching for the Departments' core provision on the Politics and International Relations of China, the Departmental Lecturer will be expected to teach on research methods, including leading on research design sessions.

If you would like to find out more about joining the DPIR and OSGA research and teaching teams at Oxford, or if you have any questions regarding the application process, please contact the DPIR HR Team at vacancies@politics.ox.ac.uk.

Candidates are also welcomed to contact the joint Head of Department at DPIR, Nicholas Owen, at nicholas.owen@politics.ox.ac.uk for an informal discussion of this post.

All enquiries will be treated in strict confidence and will not form part of the selection decision.

Responsibilities

The Departmental Lecturer will contribute to teaching and examining in the subject of the Politics and International Relations of China at the undergraduate and graduate level; participate in Departmental administration; contribute to the examining and admissions processes and conduct independent research in their field of specialism.

1. Teaching, Supervision and Administration

- Organise specific areas of the syllabus and provide teaching and supervision for graduate and undergraduate students in politics and related papers broadly conceived. These include:
  - Undergraduate DPIR: the post-holder would be expected to provide teaching (tutorials, classes and lectures) for the undergraduate paper on the Politics of China, the lectures focusing especially on the International Relations of China and the classes and tutorials across the whole of the paper.
  - Graduate OSGA: the post-holder would act as course provider for the OSGA M.Sc course on the International Relations of China and supervise a small number of M.Sc and M.Phil students working on topics related to the Politics and International Relations of China.
  - Graduate DPIR: the post-holder will be expected to teach graduate students on the core course of DPIR's M.Phil in International Relations, to supervise M.Phil students working on topics related to the Politics and International Relations of China, and contribute to doctoral research seminars and research design workshops.
  - The post-holder would be expected to produce lecture notes or slides and contribute to other course materials, including reading lists and reference guides.
- Engage in assessment and university examining on the Politics and International Relations of China at the undergraduate and graduate levels as required.
- Participate in administrative tasks to support teaching, supervision and curriculum development.
- Participate in the admission of graduate students.
- Play an active role in the intellectual life of the Department, both during term-time and vacations.
- Be first contact for student matters relating to attendance, conduct, coursework, performance, and welfare (referring matters to appropriate others).
- Gather and analyse feedback from students, colleagues, and examiners.

The Department uses a system of 'stint points' to measure teaching and supervision workload: details of the current tariff may be found in the Appendix. This post has a stint expectation of 216 stint points per year for DPIR and 72 stint points for OSGA.

2. Research

The Departmental Lecturer is expected to:

- Be actively engaged in sophisticated, original and independent research of outstanding quality in politics.
- Publish in highly-ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and presses, and present papers at conferences or public meetings.

Selection criteria

Essential

- A doctorate (or close to completion) in the Politics and International Relations of China or a closely related field, either complete or submitted and awaiting examination
- An appropriate range of teaching experience and the ability to provide excellent teaching to high-achieving students at both the undergraduate and graduate level in the Politics and International Relations of China, and to advise MPhil and M.Sc students on their research projects
- Experience in carrying out independent research in the Politics and International Relations of China or a closely related field, evidenced by a strong record of publications in highly ranked, peer-reviewed academic journals and/or major presses and a clear plan of research to be conducted during the appointment
- Excellent collaborative team working and organisational skills, together with the ability to innovate and work effectively with colleagues and to work independently meeting deadlines
- Excellent oral and written communication skills
- Demonstrated willingness to contribute to the pastoral care of students and the sensitivity to deal with pastoral issues
- Willingness, commitment and ability to contribute to the full range of academic and administrative duties in the Department, including engaging in student assessment, examination and course design
- A firm commitment to promoting awareness and understanding of equality, diversity and inclusion and embedding these principles among staff and students
- A commitment to their own professional development.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

The Department of Politics and International Relations

Politics and International Relations at Oxford University have a long and distinguished history in the education of leading figures in academia, politics, the media and public life, both in the UK and internationally. Teaching and research activities in this area were combined in 2000 to create a Department of Politics and International Relations. With around 90 academic staff, the Department is one of the largest departments internationally and consistently ranks first in The Times and The Guardian university guides for the subject. It is home to major research projects, a vibrant community of academic visitors, and a strong group of post-doctoral researchers, supported by highly competitive research fellowships, working in the full range of disciplinary sub-fields.

The department attracts some of the best academics in the field to work here as permanent faculty, as part of major research projects or as academic visitors. There is a strong post- doctoral group supported by highly competitive research fellowships and working across a broad range of fields.

The Department is located in the Social Sciences building at Manor Road, along with the Department of Economics, the Centres for Criminology and Socio-Legal Studies, and the integrated Social Science Library. The building provides excellent facilities including a lecture theatre, a large computer laboratory and a range of seminar rooms as well as a cafeteria and common room for use by both staff and students. The Manor Road Building is served by a shared IT and web team.

An experienced Professional Services function supports the department's research and teaching activities. The department's core Professional Service is grouped into teams that provide dedicated support for: Courses, Research, Finance, HR, and Communications & Alumni Relations. The administrative teams work closely with each other as well as with staff in other parts of the University, in particular with the Social Sciences division, Personnel Services, and Research Services, as well as with the University's many colleges.

The Oxford School of Global and Area Studies

The School represents a commitment by the University to enhancing teaching and research in Area Studies. It brings together seven units: the African Studies Centre, the Latin American Centre (including the Brazilian Studies Programme), the Nissan Institute of Japanese Studies, the Contemporary China Studies Programme, Russian and East European Studies, the Contemporary South Asia Studies Programme and the Middle East Programme. The administration of the School is based at 12 Bevington Road, with colleagues also providing administrative support across a number of locations in which the School's constituent units are based (including the Nissan Institute of Japanese Studies at St Antony's College and the University of Oxford China Centre at St Hugh's College).

The School is devoted to research and graduate teaching in academic disciplines which attempt to understand the complexity and the interrelatedness of society through anthropology, economics, politics, history, sociology and culture. Its teaching and research seek to take into account both the insights provided by the separate disciplines and the contextualisation provided by in-depth knowledge of specific regions and countries. Interdisciplinary collaboration to study specific social processes is encouraged, and a distinctive feature of the School is the number of its academic staff who hold joint appointments in the School and a disciplinary department in the Social Sciences or Humanities Divisions. In the most recent national research quality assessment exercise (REF2021), Area Studies at Oxford – comprising staff in the School and the Faculty of Oriental Studies in the Humanities Division - was judged to account for more world-leading (4*) research than any other Area Studies department in the UK.

The School admits around 140 graduate students a year on Masters and DPhil programmes, across the African Studies Centre, Latin American Centre, the Nissan Institute of Japanese Studies, Russian and East European Studies, Contemporary South Asia, Contemporary Chinese Studies, Middle East Studies, and the comparative Master's programme in Global and Area Studies. Additionally, the School's academic staff supervise doctoral students and teach on a range of undergraduate programmes in other parts of the University.

The School holds a bronze Athena Swan award (conferred in January 2022) to recognize good practice in promoting gender equality in higher education: representation, progression and success for all, and is committed to enhancing diversity and promoting equality of opportunity amongst all our staff and students.

Information regarding the Athena Swan Charter can be found here: <https://edu.admin.ox.ac.uk/athena-swan#collapse3170236>.

Further information about the OSGA, its component units, its staff, courses and research activities can be found on its website at www.area-studies.ox.ac.uk.

The Contemporary China Studies Programme

The post-holder will be a member of the Contemporary China Studies Programme within the Oxford School of Global and Area Studies. Research on modern and contemporary China is thriving at Oxford University and the China Studies programme is a vibrant focal point of activity, supporting students, postdoctoral research fellows and faculty members working in the School and in Chinese Studies across the University on interdisciplinary study of contemporary China. Staff directly employed in the programme are currently Paul Irwin Crookes (International Relations), Rachel Murphy (Sociology), Anna Lora-Wainwright (Human Geography), Patricia Thornton (Politics), Denise van der Kamp (China's Economy), Chigusa Yamaura (Chinese Society) and Nisha Stillman (Programme Administrator).

The programme offers two master's degrees jointly with the Faculty of Oriental Studies, a one year MSc in Contemporary Chinese Studies and a two year MPhil in Modern Chinese Studies, which together bring about 25 students per year to Oxford.

To find out more about the Contemporary China Studies Programme, see <https://www.ccsp.ox.ac.uk>.

Social Sciences Division

Oxford is a world-leading centre for research across the disciplines of the social sciences. Characterised by a wide range of methodologies, themes and fields of scholarship, multi-disciplinary research and innovative ideas thrive in an environment underpinned by excellence across the disciplines of the social sciences.

Our approach to supporting research across the Social Sciences Division has been highly successful in the last ten years, with the volume of research awards continuing to rise and the development of a large number of research centres and groupings. Researchers at Oxford receive significant support and guidance in the development of their research, including career development, research and impact funding, research project design and management, and research outputs from academic and administrative colleagues across the University, division and departments.
