

PROFILE

I am a South African Rhodes Scholar, Allan Gray Fellow, and DPhil (PhD) candidate in International Relations at the University of Oxford. I hold three degrees, have four years of award-winning experience at the highest levels of student leadership, and serve as the Chairperson of the Oxford Climate Alumni Network, a registered charity and global alumni network of the University of Oxford. Previously, I worked with the One South Africa Movement (now Build One South Africa), directly with the former Leader of the Opposition in South Africa, Mmusi Maimane MP. I strive to improve prospects for sustainable and inclusive development in Africa through my research into the politics of international energy cooperation, investigating international electricity trade in Southern and Eastern Africa. I have conducted almost 100 elite/expert interviews across three continents for this research, which I have presented at numerous reputable industry conferences. My DPhil is fully funded by the Rhodes Trust, the Oppenheimer Memorial Trust, and St Catherine's College.
